

International World Markets.

The following is a reading given in 1990 for a person living in Japan

You are entering a time when world economy is changing dramatically. Within these five years just before you, several experiences will occur internationally, which will dramatically affect the Japanese economy. As this occurs there will be an essential need for virtually every family to become a two career family, that means both parents will be required to work to maintain the family existence. Now we are well aware that the economy of this nation, and the lifestyle of this nation do not fit that image at this moment. However, with the enormous investments in renewing the economies of emerging countries, especially those that are reconstructing their economic format, you will find the financial condition of the United States strained ever more and unable to maintain itself as an economy unto itself. There will be a scramble to create a western hemisphere common market between the United States, Canada, and the countries of Central and South America, however, it is quite obvious that the countries to the south of the United States are not sufficiently stable to maintain an appropriate position within a common market without a great deal of assistance.

The United States will fall into a second and third place player in international finances as the European Common Market extends considerably, and the Far Eastern Common Market [ASEAN], the oriental common market is beginning to develop and will do ever more so, making Japan less dependent on the United States, and making the United States less dependable as an economic partner for Japan. So Japan will feel the pinch of the revolution of world economy, and a revolution it will be.

Now for all of these reasons we highly recommend that you take this step first. Work first with the concept of self-image, image of self not as merely a laborer, a secretary, or an assistant in the work that you do, but rather change the nature of your inner determination to take a career role. And be prepared to be efficient with it, and make yourself prepared to compete with male counterparts as you begin to build your career.

The appropriate job and career for you on this basis continues from the position you now hold within a stock company. Do all that you can do immediately to begin to learn the terminology of finance and the inner workings of financial exchange. Now we recommend that you do that because of past life influences which give you opportunity to understand measure for measure exchange and to understand a credit based economy, which is not based on a measure for measure exchange.

You have a further ability then to understand financial interactions and the movement of stocks. Then as a job we would highly recommend that you develop yourself to become an investment counselor, even though such work is commonly left at this time to men. You will have to train yourself considerably in dealing with banks and finance, and in better understanding stock exchanges and the movement of the market.

Now this will be an exceptional challenge to your mind, but not so much to your mind for the difficulty of understanding such, but for the replacement of self-image, for you have not asserted yourself and do not feel assertive enough to compete in a market which will turn into a market of relative competition between men and women, as women enter ever more greatly the workforce in this nation. Be not too aggressive, but you must become assertive.

At the same time develop this ability to understand and give assistance in making investment in financial management and particularly in moving investments abroad. You will find that there will come a time when there is the establishment of a high degree of interest in investing in stable currency. The stable currencies are not the currencies of the major financial nations of the world, but the currencies which have little exchange within the world, including such as Sweden, and to some extent the Swiss economy and even more so the economies of smaller nations, but in a particular way the stability of the Scandinavian Common Market will become solid. Now these things you will begin to understand and can work with as you proceed within that job.
