

Describe God

In the early Readings, Paul and the group working with him sometimes had a difficult time trying to think of questions to ask this newly found Source of wisdom and knowledge that seemed to be able to answer any question they posed. They sought profound, relevant, important questions, and thus they decided to ask, "What is God?" They thought this question surely would take many communications from Source to explain.

The Source, however, responded to their question with one short sentence. The Source said:

"A God is a Being who recognizes good without evil as a point of reference."

The Paul Solomon Source Readings

© 2007 The Paul Solomon Foundation